topper from Karnataka.

"I would love to serve Karnataka," said Jeydev, an alumni of Frank Anthony Public school in Halasuru and a graduate from NLSIU, Bengaluru.

"I have always wanted to work in the public sector. During graduation days at the National Law School, I was fortunate to understand how law and governance worked in tandem. The law school also had a history of graduates entering civil services, so that was inspiring."

Jeydev cleared the UPSC exam in his second attempt.

For Yashaswini, a resident of a Gubbihali village in Kadur taluk, clearing UPSC was a dream come true. After studying in a government school in Kadur taluk, she graduated from RV College of Engineering. "Even though it was my childhood dream to become an IAS officer, it was during my engineering days that I began preparing for the exams," she told DH.
